Generic Groundwater Power Point Presentations

The IAH Commission on Groundwater for decision-makers is looking for IAH Member volunteers to review some draft educational slide (PowerPoint) groundwater presentations. The plan is to make these presentations (and others yet to be developed) available to IAH members (in different languages) via the HQ web-site with the intention that they be used as an IAH branded educational resource. Having quality images and “approved” text can assist IAH members in promoting groundwater awareness to the public and to decision-makers while at the same time raising the profile of the IAH as a professional organization.

Are you an IAH Member?

Are you interested in promoting the hydrogeology profession?

Do you have skills in communication?

Do you have access to generic images (free of copyright) that could be incorporated into these and/or other presentations?

Right now there are three (draft) presentation sets ready for scrutiny, review, comment and editing.

Threats to water quality (50 images)

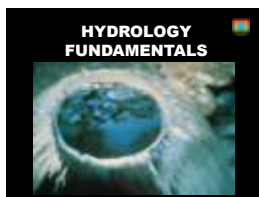

Geology Fundamentals (35 images)

Hydrology Fundamentals (36 images)

Please contact the Commission Director, Andrew Stone (astone@agwt.org) if you are interested in reviewing and helping to edit and improve these first three presentation sets and provide guidance and input to develop additional presentations that will help explain groundwater. We will provide the draft presentations to you via internet download. Please e-mail or call 1 (603) 228 5444 [American Ground Water Trust] USA Eastern time) if you want more information before making a volunteer commitment.
